New LED Traffic Lights. Drivers in Glendale will be using two kinds of green at city traffic lights: green energy and brighter green lights. Glendale's Transportation Department has upgraded traffic lights citywide to LED in an effort to conserve energy and reduce costs. LED, or light-emitting diode, last longer, use less power to energize and have a robust sharpness compared to regular lights.

A grant from the Department of Energy enabled the city to complete the conversion of LED lights throughout Glendale. The grant enabled 30 intersections to be converted making all of Glendale's 190 signalized intersections equipped with LED lighting.

The higher quality lamps will require less maintenance, resulting in fewer lane closures due to repairs. Energy and cost savings are substantial, with anticipated savings of $92,000 in annual maintenance and $65,520 in annual energy costs for the newly converted intersections. Total energy and maintenance savings for the 30 intersections will be around $157,520 annually. With 40 lights (red, green, yellow) per intersection the total conversion of 7,600 lights to LED has savings comparable to the amount of power generated for 300 homes annually.

The city's commitment to being green continues with the old traffic lights. Hundreds of reflectors, lenses and bulbs will be auctioned in July and recycled.

Butler Park Reopens

After six months of construction, Butler Park will reopen to the public. The park was selected to receive renovations as part of the Glendale Parks and Recreation Department's commitment to upgrade and update older parks.

A reopening ceremony will be held at the park, located at 57th and Alice avenues, at 8:30 a.m., Thursday, July 1. The public is welcome to attend.

Upgrades to the park include turf and landscape, renovated irrigation systems, a new lighted basketball court, new playgrounds with shade covers, pathways, picnic ramadas and security lighting.

Second Parks & Recreation Plan Update Meeting. Glendale residents are being asked to attend the second community workshop to develop the priorities and the future of Glendale's parks and recreation system.

The department is in the process of updating the existing Parks and Recreation Master Plan. The current master plan was adopted by City Council in February 2002 and since that time many changes have occurred within Glendale and the surrounding areas. The master plan identifies community priorities for recreation and park facilities along with outlining a plan of action.

The second public workshop will be held from 6:30-8:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 29 at the Glendale Adult Center, 5970 W. Brown St. This second meeting will feature information on the plan and an opportunity for attendees to provide feedback on the results of the first community workshop, community focus groups and interviews, online survey and community-wide survey.

Glendale residents' input during the planning process is critical to help establish priorities for current and future parks and recreation services, programs and facilities offered within Glendale. For more information, click here or call Glendale Parks and Recreation at (623) 930-2820.

Sewer Appeal Process and Rate Schedules. Each year in May, your sewer charge is adjusted based on your actual water usage billed for the winter months of January, February and March. Although each customer has a water meter to determine water consumption, there is no meter to measure how many gallons each customer sends into the sewer system. Monsoon Ready. The Valley's official monsoon begins today, according to the National Weather Service. Though it might be a while longer before we see those high winds and rain, it is important that residents and visitors are educated on safety measures as well as informed on what to expect in turbulent monsoon conditions.

The city of Glendale has created a Web site dedicated to monsoon information, where the public can find a wealth of information about preparing for an emergency, especially during the monsoon.

Preparation can prevent confusion and allay fears for your family in a time of crisis, and can also prevent injury or property damage. Click here to visit the site.

Starlets and Stripes at Centennial Nite Lights. Downtown Glendale shops are celebrating Glendale's Centennial by recognizing well-known celebrities from the last century. Shop owners are encouraging guests to dress like their favorite celebrities from the past during the Centennial Nite Lights celebration. The event will take place in Downtown Glendale tonight - June 18 from 5-9 p.m. in Catlin Court.

Participating shops include The Astrology Store (James Dean theme), the Cottage Garden (Marilyn Monroe theme) and The Country Maiden and Papa Ed's (The Wizard of Oz theme). Click here for more information and a full list of participating shops and themes.
